Agile Alliance announced that a limited number of Super Early Bird registrations are now available for the AGILE2014 international conference. The conference, scheduled for July 28 through August 1, 2014 in Orlando, Florida, is the largest global gathering of Agilists and widely considered the premiere event for the advancement of the field.

“If you only attend one conference in the coming year, this is the one you can’t miss,” said Mitch Lacey, AGILE2014 conference chair. “This isn’t a typical industry gathering. People don’t come to the event to check a professional development box. They come because they’re passionate about Agile development, and this is their opportunity, not just to learn practical skills and ideas that help them in their work, but to really be part of the global advancement of Agile practices and theories.”

AGILE2014 will mark the 13th year that Agile Alliance has hosted the international conference, and registration is expected to exceed last year’s recording breaking numbers--nearly 1,800 Agilists from 38 countries.

Conference attendees are encouraged to register and book hotel reservations early. A limited number of Super Early Bird registrations are available on a first come, first serve basis, providing a $750 discount over non-member registration fees.
