Eylean, provider of agile project management software for Scrum and Kanban, has introduced a personal edition of its agile task board, which will be available to customers free of charge for personal use.

Eylean provides enterprise project management software that helps companies organize their work processes in accordance with agile methodologies, using a Scrum or Kanban board. The company's clients include hundreds of organizations, including large corporates like British Petroleum, Hitachi, Velux and others.

"Seeing the benefits of Eylean project management software our enterprise clients are able to enjoy, we wanted to give an opportunity for more people to use Eylean Scrum board and organize their personal projects better. We believe that personal edition will be extremely useful for customers seeking to organize daily tasks and centralize all the work in one place by innovative means," says Tomas Sakalauskas, CEO of Eylean.

Personal edition of Eylean includes its virtual task board that is optimized for Scrum, Kanban and Scrumban. It also offers reporting and time-tracking features. Eylean users are able to import or export their data from Outlook and Excel. The personal version of Eylean is available to customers starting December 3, 2013.
