VersionOne announced several new features in its Winter 2014 Release, including Release Planning by Feature, to facilitate easier release planning in support of strategic business initiatives.

"In addition to making software delivery easier for development teams, VersionOne focuses on making release planning easier and more effective at the strategic level," said Robert Holler, CEO of VersionOne. "The latest enhancements to the VersionOne® agile ALM platform make it simple to bring the highest-value features into focus - resulting in improved alignment with stakeholders' goals, better decision making, and increased visibility at the program level."

With Release Planning by Feature, users can plan and track the progress of releases both at the strategic, feature level as well as the detailed story level. The VersionOne® Winter 2014 Release also includes refinements to PlanningRoom, VersionOne's dedicated environment where program-level planners can easily track, assess and adapt plans. With these latest updates, planning teams now have complete control over the contents of their information panels displaying the information of greatest importance to them the way they want to see it.
